MUCH PROMISING TALENT

Lee Fohl sprung Lambeth, a kid right hander purchased from Topeka a few weeks ago, on the Yankees, and the New York men made it warm for him ir just one inning. They clouted him for a pair of runs in the first, after which they knocked off hitting for the day. Cleveland kept pecking away at Allen Russell until they tied the score on him in the sixth, and then won out in the first. Artie Hofman, the former Cub, already has sent in his resignation. Circums Russell until his resignation. Circums Russell until his resignation. Circums Russell until his resignation. Circums Solly still appears to have a good eye left, but the old legs won't hold up, and he has gone back to his basaball school in Chicago. He pulled up with a charley horse after doubling yesterday, and Schaefer had to run for him. Fritz Maisel was back in centre field to-day, the first time he has tried to play a regular position since he met with his accident on the Polo Grounds on May 15.

Angel Aragon, the little Cuban infielder, reported from the Richmond clubthis morning and started the game at third base. However, Aragon succumbed to the Yankee jinx the first time he went at bat. A fourth ball hit him on the left arm, and after lingering around for two innings, Donovan was forced to take him out and substitute Boone. According to reports, waivers have been asked on Lute.
